I beg leave to state that I was afflicted with a Stricture of the Urethra for the space of 15 years accompanied with the usual distressing symptoms attendant on that complaint, such as weakness and a continual excruciating pain, which had despaired of any relief. After repeated trials of the skilled medical men of the first repute in vain (for I could only obtain temporary relief), I applied, in August, 1816, to Mr. Mynch, of 38 Duke-street, St. James's, merely from seeing his advertisement, without, I must say, any great expectations of success. From following the plan and direction of Mr. Lynch, I had the happiness to find so much relief in the short space of three weeks, that my despair was changed to the most sanguine of hopes. In short, from being one of the most miserable of men I received, as it were, new life, and in six months was entirely rid of the complaint, and can now boast of enjoying that greatest of blessings, health, in an eminent degree, which is heightened by the contrast with former sufferings. In gratitude to Mr. Lynch, as well as for the benefit of brother sufferers, I have been induced to make this acknowledgement, and trust it will be the means of relieving many a similar case; and I hereby authorise Mr. Lynch to refer any Gentleman to me, should they require further information on the subject. - All letters post paid. CHARLES TANSWELL.

WEST INDIA MADEIRA, 76l. per Pipe, 42s. per Dozen. - W. COATES having had the selection of several shipments of OLD WEST INDIA MADEIRA, has on sale a large parcel, both in Wood and Bottle, of most superior quality, at the above price, being about 50 per cent. below the average charge for Wines of this description. Hogsheads and Quarter Casks will be sold on the same terms. And to remove all doubt of the genuineness of these Wines, Purchases in the Wood may have an opportunity to selecting from upwards of Fifty Pipes, now in the West India Docks. Also a small parcel of very fine Old East India Madeira, 48s. per dozen, 85l. per pipe. - Orders for not less than two dozen will be delivered to any part of town. Families in the country sending remittances, may depend on the execution of their orders with the strictest fidelity. - Bottles and Hampers, 4s. per dozen. - East London Wine and Spirit Warehouse, No. 25, Whitechapel High-street.

QUADRILLE DANCING. - ALLEN, 211, Gerrard-street, Golden-square, gives PUBLIC LESSONS and PRACTICE in genuine QUADRILLES, Waltzes, and Country Dances, as danced by the select Fashionables of Paris and London. Youth qualified for the Profession, or Theatre. Ladies instructed to teach their Families, for aiding which he has on sale new-invented self-playing Instruments, enabling them to cultivate their own Dancing, give Balls without Musicians, or amuse themselves and friends with Music by Clock-work.

BEAUME des ARABES. - Lady Perrott, Widow of Sir Richard Perrott, Bart. most respectfully begs leave to inform the Public, that she has in her possession a valuable, and formerly well known, Medicine (the ARABIAN BALSAM), a Recipe of the late Doctor, John Armstrong, Physician General to the Forces. A long series of calamity has prevented Lady Perrott from bringing it forward, and now compels her to attempt it by subscription; to which the Countesses Ferrers, Dowager Lonsdale, Macartney, Tankerville, and Lady Luisa Stuart have benevolently contributed. The efficacy of the Arabian Balsam, in cases of debility, gout, &c.; and for wounds, can be attested by persons of the first respectability; it may be administered to an infant. The patronage Lady Perrott has experienced from a generous Public, she acknowledges with heartfelt gratitude, and induces her to hope for support, on an occasion of such importance to mankind, and which may bestow on her all the comfort she may be susceptible of. The bottles cannot be sold under seven shillings, stamp included. She will feel honoured by any commands, post paid, at No. 4, London-street, Fitzroy Square, where every particular may be learned.

A DISCOVERY has lately been introduced which bids fair to supersede the necessity of a Dentist. - HUDSON'S BOTANIC TOOTH POWDER is a certain remedy and preventive for all disorders of the mouth; it not merely cleanses and beautifies the teeth, but preserves them from decay to the latest period of life; it makes them white, fastens such as are loose, prevents those decayed growing worse, removes the tartar, and cures the scurvy in the gums, leaving the gums firm, and of a healthy redness; it is an antidote for gum-boils, swelled face, and that excruciating pain the tooth-ache, and so certain and undeviating is its effects, that there never was an instance of any person who regularly used it ever having the tooth-ache, or a tooth decay, and though so efficacious an antiseptic, it is so innocent that the contents of a box may be swallowed by an infant, without any danger. - The following Agents are appointed: - Mr. Atkinson, No. 44, Gerrard-street; Sanger, 150, Oxford-street; Gattie and Pierce, 57, New Bond-street; Rigge, 65, Cheapside; Taite, 51, Corn-hill; and most Perfumers.

TUESDAY, 30th of this Month, the GRAND MONEY LOTTERY BEGINS. CARROLL, the contractor, reminds his Friends and the Public of the approach of the Drawing. The Scheme has received the most decided approbation; it contains Three 30,000! Thirty other Capitals, and not Two Blanks to a Prize. There are no Classes, and every Prize is Sterling Money. Carroll's Offices, 19, Corn-hill, and 26, Oxford-street, have always been remarkable for the sale of capital Prizes. The very last 30,000! Prize ever drawn, also No.46, a 21,000! Prize, and many smaller Capitals in the last Lottery, were all shared and sold by Carroll.

The HERON HOUSE ASYLUM offers DISCREET services to noteworthy families. Heron House Asylum is a QUALITY ESTABLISHMENT, founded and managed by Dr. VICTOR SEYMOUR, who is a veteran of the war, and a most respectable gentleman. Dr. Seymour is able to offer the latest full immersion HYDROTHERAPY treatments, which prove to be most efficacious for patients who might be burdened with the pressures of a confused mind. The CALMING ENVIRONS of the House ensure that guests shall not be perturbed by inclement weather or the eyes of gossip-mongers, as the windows have been stopt up for this very purpose. A full prospectus is available on request, at the address below, replies only if postage paid. Heron House Asylum, Hayling Island, Hampshire.

FOR SALE, the THREE following HORSES: - 1. A PAIR of elegant BAROUCH or CHARIOT HORSES, colours bright bays, give and six years old, fifteen hands three inches high, with small heads and high forehands; they step well together, and can walk five miles an hour and trot twelve; are excellent roadsters, and are masters of great weight; price 110 guineas. Any Lady or Gentleman in want of a pair of superior horses will find them worthy of their notice, as they are in high condition, and from constant work. 3. A very handsome Dark Brown Gelding, with brown muzzle and black legs, nearly thorough bred, fifteen hands two inches high, equal to fourteen stone, with superior action; can walk five miles an hour, and trot fourteen; speed equal to any hounds, and is a steady good fencer; was hunted last season in Leicestershire; price 50 guineas. They are without a blemish of any description; would have no objection to make an exchange for one or two smaller horses. At 42 Chenies Mews, Francis-street, Tottenham Court-road.

AMONGST the numerous remedies offered to the Public for those complaints of the Stomach and Bowels, so generally prevalent at this season of the year, there are none equal to the CORDIAL TINCTURE of TURKEY RHUBARD, which continues to be faithfully prepared from the Original Recipe of the late celebrated Dr. Hunter, by J. L. Kiddle (successor to Mr. Jones, Chemist), 24, Great Russell-street, Covent-garden, where only it can be had genuine, in bottles, price 3s., 9s., and 18s. Each. This Tincture was recommended by the above eminent Physician in all Gouty and Windy affections of the Viscera, for which it is rendered particularly efficacious, by the addition of the most grateful Aromatics.

New at FORTNUM & MASON: A welcome return to our shores for the first time since the war of the fine SOFT CHEESE of the village of Camembert in Normandy, first made by a Marie Harel some quarter-century ago, and recommended served hot from the range. A spice-paste called GARRAM MASSALLAH, as utilised in the cuisine of the famous Hindoostane Coffee House of George Street, London, the first "restaurant" in the United Kingdom to serve the cuisine of the Indies, as opened by Sake Dean Mahomed, a captain of the John Company. Most recommended on chicken, or a whole cauliflower, roasted. A novel relish of pickl'd TAMARINDOS, produced by a Mr HENDERSON of the county of Yorkshire, provided as an experiment to those finding Mr Perrin's sauce from the county of Worcestershire overly piquant for their taste. We are delighted to announce that our CHINOISSERY department is first to be re-supplied with Small Soup Spoons, after a recent Soiree of Priny's quite cleared every shop in the Capital of their stocks of such items as a presentation for Ices and Puddings to delight the palette tween dances.

LAMPS, CHANDELIERS, LUSTRES, and LBRONE-T. GREENSILL, 46, Strand, the real Manufacturer and improver of the new FRENCH TABLE LAMPS, which have given such universal satisfaction, respectfully offers to the inspections of the Nobility and Gentry at his extensive SHOW ROOMS, the largest and most splendid assortment in London of the new French Table Lamps, Sinumbas, Ormolu French Chandeliers, Grecian, Roman, and every other description of Lamp; one burner of any of the above giving a light equal to six wax candles at less expense than one, and free from either smell or smoke. A BOOK of PRACTICAL HOUSEHOLD MAGIC, by a LADY MAGICIAN. Unique and indispensable formulations of magic, invaluable to every household, and includes such labour-saving innovations as a spell to summon all dust in an enclosed space into one location and a spell to keep a fire burning for longer than it normally would, as well as an explanation of how to put magic to use to complete two days' worth of laundry in the space of two hours, and to determine and effect one's fertility. Published by J. Parker, 32, Shambles, York.

The most welcome return of "Apicius Redivivus, or the Cook's Oracle: Containing receipts for plain cookery on the most economical plan for private families, etc." by William Kitchiner M.D., famed creator of wow-wow sauce, as first published in 1817. This new edition includes no less than nine catchup recipes, including two each for mushrooms and walnuts, one for cucumber, oyster, cockle and one for mussels.

NEWS.

STOCKPORT - The town magistrate has been stripped of his title, held these last 11 years, and causing considerable disarray to the officers of the court who must find a replacement to try his own predecessor. This most unusual happening has confounded the townspeople, many of whom now claim to have endured previous harms, caused by Massey's corruption. The list is prodigious, if immoral, consisting of nearly three dozen cases of wrongful imprisonment, eight counts of conspiracy to steal goods taken by bailiffs on behalf of the court (and of those, three counts of compelling bailiffs to seize goods from innocent people in the first place) and half a dozen cases of released prisoners from wealthy families, who could afford the bribes needed to release an incarcerated relative, including one man accused of murder in a local gaming club. Mr. Massey has protested the ethical basis of his actions, claiming that genuine miscreants, of the poorest and most wretched sort, were safely transported to Australia, that the goods taken were in recompense for monies lost during his work, and most importantly, that men of fine breeding deserve a chance to mend their disreputable characteristics, perhaps by engaging in honest work, or spending time in a suitable asylum; in fact, he hopes that his own modest background might be enough to sway the officers to allow his release. This, they refuse quite firmly, as Mr. Massey is expected to reveal all of the details to them. The court was first alerted to his corruption, quite by accident, as a ledger belonging to his private secretary was discovered, which detailed all of the transactions, but with coded names. What is clear is that at least one murderer is loose in England, who should rightly be in the grave.

The SOCIETY of ANTIQUARIES has announced the imminent publication of a journal titled OCCULT ANTIQUITIES of the INDIAN SUBCONTINENT. They request submissions from members and the public, on any topics which relate to the tombs and shrines of India, and the ancient objects and symbols which are found therein. Successful authors will have their articles placed alongside those of the last expedition, who promise an exciting description of the difficulties of expeditions to the Indian wilderness, and discussion of the significance and connections of the resulting archaeologia. Applicants should attend a meeting to propose their article.

INDIA - Matters continue to be tumultuous in the Orient, for the East India Company. Despite extensive investment by citizens of Britain and the unarguable growth of the Company across the whole continent, their grip on that place is somewhat shaky. Reports continue to be heard of violence on the roads wherever goods travel. Representatives of the Company have said that the situation is improving significantly at the present time - they have made contact with ringleaders and religious elders, with an eye to ending the discord and allowing merchants to travel freely around India. Many of the London investors seem to be quite satisfied - apart from the death of Mr. J. Honeyfield, an officer of the Company with antiquarian tendencies, in 1816, there have been no suspicious murders of Englishmen; those that do occur in Calcutta tend to be the poorer sort, whose tavern brawls are no worse than anything that can be seen in the port towns of England. The investors profess that some challenges are to be expected - heathen countries not being ready for the modernity of our culture.

Magistrates in Chelmsford, ESSEX, are still seeking assistance in the case of a woman with a missing husband and a missing child. The first disappearing some twenty years ago, and the latter a decade ago. The mother, one Mrs. Sarah Baker, has for ten years been walking the streets of that town, pleading for assistance for her son, John, who would now be old enough to be a man. While she had previously been treated as a lunatic the resurgence of magic has been cause to reconsider case, and any connexions to her husband William. Mrs. Baker is quite firm on the involvement of magical creatures in both these cases, saying that her husband loved her too much to leave, and that the boy was taken under gruesome circumstances. The officers of the county court hope that either of the Mr. Bakers, should they be alive, might read this newspaper, and respond by letter or in person.

ENGLAND has a long and storied history of magic, and with the great revival underway, we have every right to expect that the future course of our magnificent nation shall be a glorious one, and our naval, military and industrial activities bolstered by it. But though the gentleman's art has only recently returned to us, we have been plagued continuously by another sort, who did not have the good grace to follow the Raven King's instructions - perhaps because they are frauds and charlatans and quacksalvers. We speak of course of the hedge practitioners, those fortune-tellers and snake oil sellers, many of whom deceive the unsuspecting public, and worse, are often women. There are two solutions mooted around the Inns of Court, namely that Acts of Parliament are required, one which will re-establish the Petty Dragownes in London, and the other to expel or imprison all of the miscreants from London so that they may do no more harm.

Problems continue to beset the industrialists and landowners in DERBYSHIRE. The Derwent and its attendant waterways (long rumoured to be afflicted by the enchantments of the Raven King) are slow indeed. Despite the effort of local families, the Darley's, Mundy's &c. to divert local watercourses, the local current is scarcely enough to turn water wheels, and Arkwright's mills (which have great success in many other places) are quite deserted. Hope is given by the growing coal mines, and the promise of steam power. Some concerned citizens blame the Mundy's for making the situation worse, not better, claiming that the Fates are offended by wealthy landowners interfering with the magical connexions and traditions of the region. Some of the more troublesome sorts have interfered with property, shouting cries of "Bedlam", no doubt for the chaos that they cause. The solicitor for Mr Mundy (son of the poet) has made it known to us that the family has every regard for respectable magic, and seek gentlemen who might assist them in correcting the flow of the river. Also that slanders against his father will be met in court, and that all legal particulars are known to the officers thereof, as much as can be expected for cases which are years or even decades old.

CORK - The case of Thomas J. Galligan has ended in acquittal. A recent double murder, in early September, in which Mr. & Mrs. Sheehan of Srelane were brutally slain and their child disappeared, was thought to be the clear work of Mr. Galligan, who is known in the area for unhealthy behaviours. However, his solicitor presented a report of another killing, some years back, in nearby Ovens in which a family of bakers were murdered in a most identical fashion. Mr. Galligan being such a young man, it was not thought possible that he could have committed both crimes, and the officers of the Assizes are adamant that both crimes were committed by one person.

HAMPSHIRE - Legal confusion at the Quarter Session courts; a woman from Mengham, on Hayling Island, was caught engaging in sexual intimacies with two men in a public place. The men escaped, and were not apprehended, but the woman was held by parishioners, to whom she showed no guilt, and was quite adamant that she was not a prostitute. In the morning, however, the woman claimed that the men had enchanted her, temporarily removing her sense of shame, and causing her to engage in behaviour which was not within her control. She can hardly be claimed to be innocent, as she freely admitted her crime, and she is not mad, however the Mayor of Portsmouth, presiding over the case, has declared a recess, until the ramifications of magical enchantment can be better understood, and whether some power exists that could take away the emotions of a woman. If the enchantment was applied against the woman's will, then the men are guilty of molestation, but it could equally be that she desired the procedure to take place, in which case all parties are guilty. Can a person be considered to be insensible for a short period, and should this provide them with any more alibi than the consumption of excessive amounts of beer and spirits? The case resumes in January, and magicians are invited to visit with the Mayor by appointment. Address letters to the, Town Hall, Portsmouth, return postage paid.

FRENCH PAPERS.

PARIS, Oct. 5. - Letters from Marseilles of the 1st of this month state, that the minds of the inhabitants are more aggravated respecting the yellow fever. The warm weather has ceased, and the winds now prevalent should remove this scourge from their coasts, but the fever continues unabated, and has an unusual character to it. Since this epidemic was introduced into the lazaretto, it has attacked nineteen persons, including the individual who was lately removed from Marseilles to the lazaretto. This man is doing well, and of the whole number eight only have died. (Moniteur.)

The King of FRANCE has addressed a command to the bishops, and which has also been communicated to the Prefects, by the Minister of the Interior, prescribing a solemn service to be performed in all the churches of the Kingdom, on the 16th instant, (a day of mournful recollection) in commemoration of the death of her late Majesty, MARIE ANTOINETTE, of Austria, Queen of FRANCE.

BRITTANY - Word reaches us that diverse citizens of France are travelling to the town of Concoret, where miraculous events are said to have taken place several years past. A verified kidnapping by Fée' took place, in which a human child was switched for an otherworldly creature. The local priest documented the infant's behaviour which included speaking archaic French as an adult might. The townspeople were much concerned, until a British woman rescued the child from Val Sans Retour, where it had been captured. The commoners are convinced that the woman travelled to a 'Château de Fées' hidden there, and that the rescued child is blessed by The Saviour. Adventurers and vagabonds search the valley and forest with little result, and the curious and the desperate converge on the town, where they hope to be granted wisdom and good health by the boy, who is grown a little, but not yet a man. Lords and Ladies have found their amusements here - even the King of France has visited - but events take a turn for the worse as Parisians with yellow fever have begun to arrive there. Our readers may share our concern that the sickness reaches the ports there, and passes in Cornwall and the south coast of England.

Letters from Perignan of the 29th of September, announce, "the fever continues to make great ravages at Barcelona and Tortosa, where it is no longer possible to reckon the numbers of deaths. Equally destructive is it at Fraga and Mequinenza in Arragon. Private letters of the 14th received from Palma, the capital of Majorca, mention its appearance there: and we know that it exists at Zeres de la Frontera and Port St. Mary, in Andalusia. The Bulletins published at Barcelona report that the 19th to the 25th of September inclusive, there were at Barcelonetta, 224 deaths, 339 new cases. Barcelona, 143 deaths, 303 new cases. It is now evident that this disorder is of an uncommonly malignant character; it is epidemic and contagious; it resists all the efforts of art, both medical and magical; and the number of its victims are daily increasing in the infected towns.

The superior authorities of CATALONIA have taken up their residence at Espanaguera, situated at the foot of Mount-Serrat. A proclamation issued by the Political Chief of the province, states that a Cordon has been established before Tortosa, and expresses great uneasiness relative to Upper Catalonia, in consequence of the existence of the yellow fever at Mequienza. An appeal is made to the Catalonians to give assistance to the unfortunate inhabitants of Barcelona.

On the 21st, three Spanish vessels bound to Marseilles, were driven by stress of weather to take shelter at Port Vendre. One of them came from Seville, a second from Alicante, and the third from Barcelona. The latter had on board six seamen of the French ship La Josephine, nearly the whole of whose crew had died of the fever in the port of Barcelona.

MADRID, SEPT. 27. The political Chief of Navarre, learning the enemies of the Constitutional System had spread a report that some parties of the factions were abroad, has published an official Proclamation, dated 17th, announcing that there reports are entirely destitute of truth, and that the roads were never more secure.

The Extraordinary Cortes made the following elections on the 24th: - M. VALLEJO, Bishop of Majorca, President; M. PAUL, Vice-President; M. MEDRANA, the second, M. PALACEA, the third, and M. GIL DE LINARES, the fourth, Secretaries. The President then proclaimed the Cortes to be installed. A deputation waited on the KING to acquaint him with it. His MAJESTY expressed his satisfaction at learning that the Cortes was appointed, and his intention of going to-morrow to the Assembly, to assist at the opening of the Session.

The ravages of the yellow fever have been a little abated at Barcelona, but it continues to rage at Tortosa. From seventy to eighty individuals (exclusive of children) have perished daily in this small city, containing only 8,000 inhabitants; not a third of the population remains in their dwellings. Several of the inhabitants have withdrawn to their extensive gardens without the city. The heat is greater by five degrees at Tortosa than at Barcelona.

The details of the horrors committing at Barcelona are truly frightful; and as if the disorder was not sufficiently destructive, some wretches avail themselves of the stupor and depression of the inhabitants to increase the number of victims by poison and assassination. The water of two wells has been poisoned; and two monsters were apprehended in the act of throwing some manner of toxic concoction on some fish exposed for sale in the market, though they insisted that they were merely using herbal remedies to sooth the minds of the customers. Not a day passes without the perpetration of some criminal act of this nature, for the purpose of enabling the perpetrators to plunder the houses, the inhabitants of which are thus carried off. The inhabitants of Barcelonetta, who were first attacked with the disorder, made three weeks ago a forcible irruption into the town, to which may chiefly be attributed the infection of Barcelona. A similar attempt was made on the 26th of this month, but fully aware of the evils that might be the consequence, the Militia of Barcelona repulsed them, with the loss of five men killed, and eight wounded. (Gazette de France.)

The Memorial Bearnai affirms that the yellow fever does not extend beyond Mequinenza. The ravages of this disorder at that town and in Tortosa have been exaggerated. According to respectable authorities, there exists no symptoms of the yellow fever in Andalusia. (Journal de Paris.)

The inhabitants of Tortosa, who are surrounded by a cordon of troops, have just made a desperate attempt to pass the line of demarcation. The troops were obliged to repulse them with their bayonets. A commission, composed of the principal officers of the troops of the line in garrison at Madrid have sent a message to the Chiefs of the National Militia, explaining their sentiments on the subject of the misunderstanding which the disaffected were desirous of creating between these two corps.

The mystery which envelopes the conspiracy at Saragossa, against the Government will shortly be laid open, for the trial of the principal conspirator, VILLAMOR, began on the 21st of September.

According to a letter from Seville, of the 19th, the Farnese regiment of cavalry, with 40 horse artillery and 50 infantry, are carrying on a war of extermination against ZALDIVAR, which we hope to see concluded by the death or capture of his band.

The National Militia of Madrid have transmitted Addresses to the KING and the Permanent Deputation of the Cortes, declaring their devotion to his MAJESTY and the Constitutional system, which VILLAMOR and the other conspirators of Saragossa endeavoured to subvert.

CALAIS - Trouble besets the docks in that place, most concerning events, in which ships have been damaged by the actions of dock workers and attendant people. Rumours of spies, French and English, travelling one way or the other, have raised tempers, added to which, humiliations inflicted by the Seventh Coalition continue to aggravate the revolutionary sympathisers who are so common amongst the working poor. Amongst them, it is widely believed that various absurd claims are true - Napoleon being returned, a child king, heretics in Carcassonne, &c. Continental trade with France is much affected by this unruly behaviour, but in practice, they harm only themselves, as other ports will be used instead.

COPENHAGEN - That nation - brought low by the efforts of Britain in the Gunboat War, and the Seventh Coalition's victory against Napoleon - continues to root out radicals around the capital, for fear of further weakening of the government there. Unlike the modernisers found in other countries, they declare that they follow the ancient laws of Absalon of Denmark, and seek the return of the Estridsen bloodline to the Throne, declaring KING FREDERICK to be a usurper and supplanter.

ST. PETERSBURG - Friction within the royal court, where modernisers have an eye on European society and industry. EMPEROR ALEXANDER, desiring to appease them, and improve the treasury, is opening the country to European trade. The threat of the Ottomans to the south is made worse if there is civil unrest. Russian meddling in the AEGEAN PENINSULA, and the GREEK uprising there, is a double-edged sword.

VIENNA, SEPT. 27. It is said the King of NAPLES has recalled Prince RUFFO, his Ambassador at our Court. A courtier arrived the day before yesterday from St. Petersburg. We have news from Constantinople of the 8th, by way of Jassy; they are of no importance

GOSSIP.

The mysterious MADAM ANITRA continues to excite the parlours and coffee-houses. Scandalous secrets are revealed, and futures discerned, but not can predict her movements - Countess Conyngham is said to be most exasperated that she cannot meet her. Other notables have been displeased by their encounters, protesting that their laundry has been aired in a public place, but the supporters of our unknown fortune-teller are quite protective of her.

Lady Ingrid von Bülow, famed for her connexions to the Danish court, is in England, perhaps seeking a proper English gentleman.

The Duke of Wellington has harsh words for the various published papers! At a party last week, he was heard to complain about the quality of the letters pages, saying that "English gentlemen rarely know anything at all about magic, but they never seem to tire of writing letters about it!" Let us hope that he does not refer to our own esteemed readers!

There is a gathering being held this weekend, in distant Monmouth, and a number of notable ladies will be attending. The Eagleshams, laid low by the awful Lushington affair, are back in force. Miss Stanton-Lacy, daughter of the diplomat Sir Horace will be in attendance, and Lord Charles Ingoldsby Paulet, who has not been in public for several years. People are saying that it will be quite the party - it's supposed to be some sort of magical get together, but all sorts of things could happen!

CUISINE.

A novel recipe for Mrs Parmentier's especial favourite vegetable entitled "Potatoes fried in Slices or Shavings", instructs the reader to "peel large potatoes, slice them about a quarter of an inch thick, or cut them in shavings round and round, as you would peel a lemon; dry them well in a clean cloth, and fry them in lard or dripping".

On the Marchioness of Tavistock and her "Afternoon tea".

Belvoir castle has been the home of the Manners family for three hundred years and seat of the Dukes of Rutland since the creation of the title, over a century ago. Even those who have not had the pleasure of an invitation to the Wyatt castle, will recall the terrible fire which tore through this masterpiece of the gothic revival not four years ago, and will be delighted to know that its rebuilding proceeds apace, the construction greatly speeded by an Act of Magic by a magician who I am told is Most Notable. Sadly, paintings by Titian, Rubens, Van Dyck and Reynolds are irreplaceable and lost to us forever. Still, sufficient of the fabric is now complete for the house to entertain guests, and the 5th Duke has taken full advantage. At a recent weekend party, and event of Such Notice took place that your diarist records it here, so that Posterity may be able to give credit where it is due.

Many of you will recall the Francis Russell, son of John Russell, 6th Duke of Bedford and his delightful wife the Hon. Georgiana Byng? Francis was educated at Westminster School and graduated from Trinity College, Cambridge in 1808, with a Master of Arts. Marquess of Tavistock since 1802, he entered the Commons in 1809, sitting as Member of Parliament for Peterborough until 1812 and currently representing Bedfordshire.

(By the by, your diarist contends he may not be the brightest light in the family. His younger brother John may have entered the House of Commons by virtue of his father, the Duke of Bedford, instructing the 30 or so electors of Tavistock to return him as an MP even though at the time Russell was abroad and under age, but he has recently embraced the cause of parliamentary reform, and we foresee a gilded future for him.)

We expect lasting fame to rest upon his wife, Marchioness of Tavistock as you will know her, Anna Maria, né Stanhope, eldest daughter to General Charles Stanhope, The Right Honourable The Earl of Harrington, Eton and the Guards who we feel confident you will recall from the Battle of Saratoga amongst other adventures.

At this recent weekend at the Manner estate, the party had enjoyed a delicious - though light - luncheon of pasties and potted meat at midday. Dinner was announced for 8pm, as is customary, and the party took to the garden for a most agreeable turn around the grounds, enjoying the vistas for which Belvoir is eponymous. The afternoon lengthened, with no refreshment at all, and as a consequence of such exercise some of the ladies of the party were left feeling more than a little peckish. Without even her hostess' permission, the marchioness summoned the staff, and instructed them to prepare a light meal of tea - we believe she chose Darjeeling - cakes - such as one might have for breakfast - and sandwiches - ham and mustard, to be precise. This, she reflected, would give the correct balance for an afternoon snack that would provide perfect refreshment. We predict this "afternoon tea", will soon become an established and convivial repast in homes of the upper class, and thence become popular in households of the more middling sort.

SHIP NEWS.

DEAL, Oct. 9. - Sailed the Brisk sloop of war, on a cruise to the westward, PORTSMOUTH, Oct.9. - Arrived his Majesty's ship Driver, from Chatham for Leith. The Hidden Mistress, East India Company ship, is still unloading.

[FROM THE BOARD OF THE NEW ENGLAND COFFEEHOUSE, OCTOBER 9.] LIVERPOOL, Oct 7. - Sailed this day, with wind S.E. the Atlantic, Cortes, Rockingham, and Superior, for New York; Mercury, for Boston; Kensington, for Philadelphia; and Richard Plaskett for Charlesworth, with Pallas for Savannah. - The number of vessels sailed this day from this port, are estimated to be nearly 300.

Treasury Chambers, Aug. 2. GENTLEMEN - With reference to your two reports of the 8th of June last, on the subject of relaxing the law in favour of Galliot, I am commanded by the Lords Commissioners of his Majesty's Treasury to acquaint you that my Lords concur with you as to the expediency of relaxing the law of 57 George III, chapter 33, in favour of Galliot above 50 tons, and classing them with square rigged vessels; and I am to desire you will cause the draft of a clause to be prepared for that purpose, and govern yourselves accordingly until the pleasure of Parliament shall be known. GEORGE HARRISON. To the Commissioners of Customs.

LETTERS.

Letter from the EDITOR

In this tumultuous era, we can easily be drawn into the troubles in one place or another, and forget the successes of our country, and our noble allies. The COLONIES continue to provide great wealth to the CROWN; France prospers under our guidance - the revolutionary zeal that flares up in PARIS can hardly be representative of the rest of the country, and claims of Napoleon on the loose are too spurious to print in this publication; PRUSSIA is a well-ordered country, expanding their territory, and only held back by the slow pace of industry in that nation. Let us pray that the civility of our country is a guiding light for our friends and allies.

To the EDITOR of the MORNING POST.

SIR - YOU have for many years announced, through the medium of your well conducted and widely circulated Paper, the establishment of the MEDICAL BOARD, Instituted by the celebrated Dr. Cooper, and assisted by eminent Surgeons and Physicians of nearly forty year' experience. Messrs. COOP and CO. request you will have the kindness to inform your readers, the whole of their practice is concentrated at Charlotte House, Great Charlotte-street, Blackfriars-road, where several rooms are appropriated for consultation. The object of this arrangement is, that every case may have the opinion of Dr. Cooper and the whole Board; and in order that the Public may be apprized of the above circumstance, so advantageous to them, you will be pleased to insert this Notice for one month. - By order of the Board. - I have the honour to remain your obedient servant.

ROBT. C. BELL, M.D. Sec.
All letters addressed to Sir F. C. Daniel, Treasurer, are laid before the Board the same day. - Medical Board, Charlotte House, Surrey, Nov. 6, 1820.

To the EDITOR of the MORNING POST.

SIR - In the short period of six months, notwithstanding the innumerable cases which have arisen to teach the Public caution, one fatal accident from some of the various poisons, has trodden fast on the preceding, apparently under circumstance of greater misery.

These cases, Sir, are probably but few of the multitude, as we seldom hear of there where life is preserved, and the grave too often closes over its victim without the formality of an Inquest, without even the unfortunate subject being published as a warning to others to avoid similar danger. The first melancholy case made known to the Public in the present year was that of the wife of a respectable innkeeper, Mr. GEORGE, of the Union Inn, Stow-in-the-Wold, who, in the month of March last, received a poison from a druggist instead of an ounce of Epsom salt, death ensuing in a few hours. The second case was that of GEORGE COUSINS, the servant of Lord EXETER, at Burghley, which was remarkable for the shortness of time in which the oxactic acid caused his death, he having expired within ten minutes after its ingestion. In the month of July an Inquest was held on the body of Mr. SMITH, of Queen-street, Grosvenor-square, who perished in a similar manner. Early in the month of August the death of MARY MORGAN, a respectable woman, having a large family, was found by the Jury assembled before T. STIRLING, Esq. at the Rising Sun, High-street, Marylebone, to have arisen from a similar cause. Added to these the Public are this month informed of the case of a young man, servant to Mr. TAYLOR, of Westgate-street, Gloucester, who life was saved by proper medicine; and of the recorded death of SARAH BROWN, of Stoneaston, Somersetshire, from a poisonous salt, adding another melancholy instance of inattention to the means we have long offered to the Public of perfect security from such dreadful accidents, namely, by never suffering a single ounce of Epsom salt to be delivered from our manufactory without an envelope, on which is printed, "Pure Epsom Salt", and in sealed packages.

Would the Public never suffer an ounce of the medicine to come into their houses without these distinguishing marks, this invaluable medicine would no longer be indirectly the cause of accidents so much to be deplored.

With these feelings, Sir, we have been induced to address you, and we shall feel no small satisfaction if we should become the fortunate agents of rescuing one individual from an untimely death. - We are, Sir, yours most respectfully,

C. and G. JOHNSON and CO.

Great Totham, October 8, 1821

To the EDITOR of the MORNING POST.

SIR - As you have been pleased to give publicity to some remarks on a few peculiar words in your last Tuesday's Paper, I have presumed to trouble you with the following. Your's, &c. A.E. There is a word of five syllables, from which, if you take one, no syllable remains - monosyllable. The two longest monosyllables in our language are strength and straight, and the very longest word, honorificabilitudinitas, but this is an obsolete phrase, and I believe not to be found in any vocabulist except BAILEY, who has borrowed it from the Latin, in which language it has a letter more, viz. Honorificabilitudinitas. We have a term for a beggar which may be divided without the transposition of a single letter, with only the addition of an apostrophe, so as to make it a complete simple sentence, and such a sentence, as a person of this description may generally address himself withal, the term is mendicant, and the sentence arising from its division, mend I can't, which many of them may truly assert.

SIR, I beg to be informed of further detail upon the plight of the Greek soldiers, who fight so valiantly in the Aegean Peninsula, and are seeking to overthrow the yoke of their Moslem oppressors. It is said that Russia smiles kindly upon them, but that the European powers are nervous of supporting revolutionaries. It cannot be so! What secret reasons must they possess, to make them think thusly? It is apparent to any right-thinking person, that we must support them forthwith. The Ottoman Empire is no friend of Britain, and will only be strengthened if the Grecians should fail. There are steps which can be taken, even by those of us who are not of a military persuasion. I speak, of course, of that second great art, so recently engendered in England, and practised by gentlemen of the noblest sort, that is to say the art of the industrialist and philanthropists, who might desire to see Christian values returned to a place long held by heathen sorts. Might we enact a trade embargo to weaken the Turks, or engage in some other such activity, which will cause them harm, and strengthen the cause of the Greeks. I do not know of magical matters, beyond that which any visitor to London might see in Vauxhall-gardens, but I would not be surprised if the devotees of that lesser craft are able to provide their own assistance, in some trivial way; a straw which might break the back of a camel, and they have rather a lot of camels in the eastern Mediterranean. Let wealthy patrons across England join with me, and show the beneficent nature of the harder working citizens of this country.
J. WILSON WALLACE.

SIR, this periodical is well known for its constant references to vagabond magicians and immoral witches, and though we must all be wary of such people, it is too common to see the very Revival of English Magic cast in poor light. This is the greatest opportunity of our age, more significant than our military and our industry, for it encompasses both, and exceeds them greatly. If you do not believe that there are honourable and respectable magicians, then I would point you to the man who is surely the greatest magician of our era. I refer to Lord Thornley, who is well regarded by us here in Nottinghamshire and who continues the good work done by Mr. Norrell. Lord Thornley is both a diligent student of the art, and a gracious practitioner of it. Only last month, he attended a dinner party at our townhouse, although Lady Thornley was sadly unable to join him. After we had eaten a hearty meal, he kindly performed a powerful enchantment before our eyes, which has cast a protective ward upon the entire county of Nottinghamshire, which will reduce crime and accidents for several months. I hope your readers will join me in celebrating the foremost practitioner in all England, and realising that not all magicians are charlatans and purveyors of snake oil.
Mr. C. L. Morley, Mayor of Nottingham.

Sir, It is essential that I correct your correspondent from Oct. 3rd, on the matter of Universal Suffrage. His suggestion, that women must engage in elections, is the highest absurdity imaginable. It is absolutely proper that all right-thinking men should pursue Universal Suffrage, but it cannot be done with such blatant disregard for the domestic order of our nation. Even to raise such an idea might cause distress to the women of our households, already burdened with the many duties of family and society. Should I expect to be greeted with some new ridiculousness, each time I open the Post? Does your correspondent realise the emasculating inference he makes? That men are not capable of adequately representing their own wives and children? Might we next suggest that infants require the vote, or perhaps every horse in the stable? It is essential that the corrupt structure of the House of Commons is reformed, and the case is only weakened when we entertain naive strategies such as a women being allowed to vote.
A.R.

SIR, I would bring to your attention the coastal waters of the British Isles. It is a matter of record that the esteemed Mr. Norrell cast protective spells thereon, but what is to become of them now? It has been four years, and who has appeared to continue the good work already done? I wager that the enchantments will not last forever, but we are furnished with street magicians and witches where we need truly miraculous masters of the arts. The Gunboat War might have lasted years more without the spells, and we all know the concerns over the French revolutionaries, who would once again tear down the ancient foundations of their monarchy. Let us not fall into complacency simply because we are not currently at war. It is the clear duty of the government and the admiralty to see that these works are done immediately; assuming, of course, that a suitable practitioner can be found.
J.W.

SIR, I write to you on a matter of utmost importance, which is to say a matter which is of significance to every man woman and child in this country. The present constitutional conditions - which, I might add - have served this nation well in recent centuries, are quite undermined by talk of magical sovereignty, and suggestions that legal powers might shift to the North. Though I could not countenance this situation in any case, it might be remembered that the Raven King has not shown his face since the Middle Ages, and folktales make no basis for undoing the good work of generations of parliamentarians in our famous and expansive capital. That is not to say, of course, that those medieval provisions are not worthy of consideration, as we enter an era when magic is seen in every town, and antiquated laws might now be relevant again. But where those laws attempt to steal power from London, and the rightful Crown of all England, they cannot be permitted by gentlemen of good conscience.
T.M.

SIR, I must beg my fellow readers to answer a question for me: What are the boundaries of England? At a dinner party, Tuesday last, I requested the same of a self-proclaimed magician, but he could offer no satisfactory reply. If one looks at the Welsh border, or the Scottish one, there are places which have changed hands on numerous occasions, so where is the border? I speak not of the mundane border, drawn with a quill on paper, for that is the one which changes on a regular basis. Rather, I mean to discuss the natural boundaries, established long ago. For example, what of our lost territories in France? Might the people of Normandy and Brittany share some mystical circumstances with us? If so, is it a matter of ancient title, or simply one of proximity across the Channel? And why is it that we see no difference betwixt the northern and southern regions of our nation? Great thanks in advance of illuminating replies.

A WELL-OUTFITTED, SUITABLY RECONDITIONED SHIP WITH NEW SAILS, RIGGING, &c. will be placed under AUCTION by Messrs Sutherland & Sutherland at Pier 34, Bristol, on Monday, October 23rd at noon. The ship, named the Hannibal, is 450 tonnes and has placements for thirty-six guns, not included in the sale. A Slave Ship, now no longer authorised for this purpose, has an expansive hold, which has been refurbished with expanded headroom to encourage more respectable uses for the space. The vessel's captain, one Thomas Phillips was arrested in 1811 for violating the 1807 Abolition of slave trade on British soil and Colonies. While the Hannibal's owners, Mr. Paul Smith and Mr. Harvey Petersen denied all knowledge of the situation, financial records found in their office pointed to Phillips operating at their behest, and the three are presently serving prison sentences further to unlawful trading in slaves. The Crown, having since seized their assets after a legal hearing lasting not less than thirty-seven months, has put up the Hannibal for auction in an attempt to recoup the losses incurred from having the vessel in dry dock for the last seven years. The starting bid is reputed to be a mere THREE THOUSAND POUNDS, much lower than the normal sale-price at the time, which would have been between nine and twelve guineas per tonne. Despite the lurid past of the vessel, this author has investigated, and can assure you, the reader, that this ship is most definitely a bargain!

An expansive FREEHOLD ESTATE in AWILTSHIRE, near Avebury. The Shadow House itself is in need of restoration, as are the grounds, which possess extensive woodlands of birch, rowan, hawthorn, yew, and oak, as well as orchards producing various fruits, all grown wild, and in need of replacement. A low reserve has been set for this property, but it would be most desirable for a buyer seeking solitude - the locals take little interest, cause little trouble, and other visitors are few. Also of interest to those with magical connexions, it being the abode of the Absalom family, who have not inhabited the property for several centuries. Sold on behalf of the County of Wiltshire officials, by Messrs. ROBINS, Piazza, Covent Garden, on Nov. 14th, at 2 o'clock in the afternoon.
